PRISON SITE DEEDS PLACED IN ESCROW

Deposited In Bellefonte Banks Pending Payment for Farms.

READY TO CLOSE DEAL

State Treasury Checks to be Turned Over to Owners of Lands as Soon as Certificate of Title Insurance is Filed at Harrisburg.

Deeds to the several farms comprising the site for the new State penitentiary are being executed this week. The closing of the deal is now but a matter of a few days.

As rapidly as the deeds are executed they are placed in escrow in the several banks in Bellefonte. There they remain until the money for the same is formally paid over by the State.

V. M. Graham, representing the Potter Title Abstract Company, of Pittsburg, is in Bellefonte this week working on the deeds. His company is placing title insurance on the several deeds, and when the list is completed that fact will be certified to the State Treasurer, who will issue checks to cover each deed.

The deeds covering the several Reynolds farms are now in escrow in the First National Bank. That for the Crust farm is in escrow in the Centre County Bank. Others will be so placed in the Bellefonte Trust Company. It is thought that but a few days longer will be required to complete the work and thus put the matter in shape for the formal paying over of the money to the several land owners.

Pittsburg newspapers last Thursday revealed for the first time that one of the reasons for delay in the State making payment for the several farms comprising the new penitentiary site was the hesitancy of Auditor General Sisson to pass upon the necessary warrants until he might be protected by a legal opinion rendered by Attorney General Bell. It seems that the legal hitch arose over some doubt as to whether or not Centre County was eligible for the prison site, the law providing for the new prison stipulating that it be located "in the western part of the State." The Pittsburg newspapers, in Harrisburg despatches, told of this latest hitch and also of its satisfactory adjustment, as follows:

"Attorney General John C. Bell has given an opinion to Auditor General Sisson to the effect that the selection of a site for the new Western Penitentiary in Centre County is not in conflict with the provision of the act of Assembly designating that the institution shall be located 'In the western part of the State.'

"As the Auditor General is required to pass upon all warrants for the expenditure of public money he wished to assure himself that the proposed location was within the provisions of the act before approving the payment of money for the land.

"The board of inspectors of the Western Penitentiary has selected a site in Centre County, near State College, and is prepared to take title to about 3,900 acres of ground, with the approval of Governor Tener. The titles to the properties have been investigated and all the papers for the transfer are ready, the approval of the Auditor General alone being required.

"Attorney General Bell in his opinion says that 'separated from its contract and considered wholly apart from the subject matter of the act in question, the phrase, in the western part of the State would ordinarily mean the geographical western part of the State, but these words considered and understood not merely according to their ordinary general meaning, but according to this meaning as applied to the subject matter with regard to which they are used have, in my judgment, a wider signification.'

"The Attorney General quotes from an act of 1871, in which the State is divided into eastern and western penitentiary districts, and Centre County is attached to 'The western district of Pennsylvania so far as respects the punishment of offenders convicted in said counties,' etc. He adds: 'A line dividing Pennsylvania into two penitentiary districts is accurately defined by the foregoing legislation, and its location is presumed to have been known by the Legislature of 1911.'"

Warden Francies is looked for here any day with the checks for the farms.

GYPSIES PAID $85

To Trade Horses and Tell Fortunes in Clearfield County.

The authorities of Centre county would do well to follow the example of the Clearfield county officials in dealing with gypsy bands, some of whom make it their business to flim-flam gullible victims, as related by the DuBois Courier:

It cost George John, head of a big gypsy band and the first one to appear in this section this season, just $85 to continue gypsying. And at that he must confine his meanderings to Clearfield county or pay $50 for each other county he visits.

He and his band of two dozen people and many horses and wagons, but recently from Brazil, struck camp at Oklahoma recently and shortly afterward the law of May 1909 was applied to him, which resulted in his fine, buying a license and paying the costs.

Constable Smith, Jeffries and Averill went to the camp in an auto and the band was formally placed under arrest and brought to the office of Squire Barclay, where they were informed of the law. The gypsies were anxious to settle and were accordingly sold a license for $50, giving justice to the sum of $10 fine and ordered to pay costs amounting to $24.50 in addition to 50 cents for issuing the license. They settled and were excused.

The men—there were a dozen of them in court—returned to their camp to trade horses, etc., while the women came in from camp to go about their customery begging in town.

SCHOOL CODE UPHELD

Supreme Court Sustains Measure by Narrowest Kind of Majority.

The State Supreme Court on Monday rendered an opinion sustaining the constitutionality of the new school code. The code was upheld by a bare majority of one, three members of the court, Justices Brown, Mestrezat and Stewart vigorously dissenting and filing a minority opinion. Judge von Moschzisker, who prepared the majority opinion declared that the school code was the product of "the deliberate thought of a commission of prominent citizens" who had worked on the measure for several years and that the code was passed only after thorough consideration by two Legislatures.

In sharp conflict was the dissenting opinion by Justice Brown, who said if the code was to be sustained the section of the constitution prohibiting special legislation should be stricken out. He added:

"It requires but a glance at the act to see that it is an attempt to evade the constitution. It is special legislation under the attempted disguise of a general law. Of all forms of special legislation this is the most vicious."

Before the opinion was handed down there was a wide-spread belief over the State that the code would be declared unconstitutional.

Major Butt's Great Wish.

The will of Major Archibal Butt, victim of the Titantic, filed in Washington, D. C. on Tuesday, disclosed the fact that the one great wish of the president's aide is impossible of realization.

It was that he should be buried in Arlington National cemetery and that the family name might be perpetuated there by a modest monument over his grave.

In his will the young army officer had set aside $500 for this purpose. Major Butt left his personal effects to his two brothers, and provided that the residue of his estate be converted into cash and divided between the eldest children of the two brothers.

In view of the disclousures in the will there is a strong likelihood that a movement will be started looking to a suitable memorial to Major Butt at Arlington.

KURTZ INJECTS SALT INTO RIVAL'S WOUNDS

Elected National Delegate at Democratic State Convention.

TO JOLT P. GRAY MEEK

Reorganizers' Faction Uses Steam Roller at Harrisburg and Jams Through Slate Without a Break—Berry Named for State Treasurer.

By a vote of 110 to 73 the Old Guard of the Pennsylvania Democracy went down to defeat before the reorganizers at the Harrisburg State convention on Tuesday. The recording of the test vote between the rival factions sounded the death knell of the old Guffey regime in Pennsylvania. Up to the last minute the regulars and also the reorganizers claimed control. The show-down came in the convention, and when the Guffey forces, led on the floor by Ex-Judge James Gay Gordon, of Philadelphia, saw that they were 19 votes in the minority they shot up the flag of surrender and joined with their successful rivals in making the several nominations by acclamation.

Governor Wilson, of New Jersey, was indorsed for President, and the twelve delegates-at-large from Pennsylvania will go to the Baltimore convention instructed for him. Charles R. Kurtz, of Bellefonte, editor of the "Centre Democrat," who has been leading the anti-Meek faction here for years, had himself elected one of the twelve delegates-at-large in order to rub it in on P. Gray Meek, who was defeated for national delegate in this district at the recent primaries. As a result of the reorganizers' victory Meek was dropped as secretary of the Democratic State Committee, a berth he had held for many years.

Congressman A. Mitchell Palmer wil be elected to succeed Colonel Guffey in the Democratic National Committee. George W. Guthrie was elected State Chairman.

The first and only test of strength between the contending factions came on the election of the permanent chairman of the convention. Selected by both factions William A. Glasgow, of Philadelphia, served as temporary chairman. For permanent chairman, J. G. O'Brien, of Lackawanna County, was put up as the candidate of the reorganizers for permanent chairman, while Judge Gordon was the choice of the regulars. The vote stood 110 for O'Brian and 73 for Gordon. Had the regulars won Gordon would have been their choice for national committeeman. Just before the convention organized Congressman Palmer questioned the credentials of Charles P. Donnelly, one of the leaders of the old Donnelly-Ryan organization in Philadelphia. Donnelly appeared in the convention with the credentials of a delegate from another district. When Congressman Palmer appealed from the ruling of the chair on the propriety of Donnelly sitting in the convention, Judge Gordon cleverly averted a test of strength by taking he floor and announcing that Donnelly would withdraw. Several minutes later the show-down came and with this the old regulars went down to defeat. The convention then nominated William H. Berry for State Treasurer, and Robert E. Crisswell, of Johnstown, for Auditor General. The slate put up the night before at the cancus of the reorganizers was then ratified by the convention, as follows:

Congress-at-large—George B. Shaw, Westmoreland; Joseph Howley, Allegheny; George R. McLean, Luzerne, and E. E. Greenawalt, Lancaster.

Delegates-at-large—A. Mitchell Palmer, Monroe; Vance C. McCormick, Dauphin; L. W. Reiff, Berks; Roland S. Morris, Philadelphia; George W. Guthrie, Allegheny; Charles S. Duncan, Adams; W. W. Bailey, Cambria; E. J. Lynett, Lackawanna; Charles R. Kurtz, Center; John A. Thornton, Philadelphia; Henry H. Wilson, Beaver, and Fred C. Kirkendall, Luzerne.

Alternate delegates-at-large—H. S. Meyers, Butler; Samuel S. Leiby, Perry; Frank B. Rhoades, Delaware; John S. Shirely, Clarion; W. Frank Walters, Cumberland; O. L. Fehr, Northampton; E. J. Lichtenwalner, Lehigh; Charles D. Stucker, Dauphin; L. N. Spencer, Lancaster; David Wallerstein, Philadelphia; S. E. Walker, Warren, and William M. Fairman, Jefferson.

Electors-at-large—T. J. Duncan, Washington; N. R. White, Tioga; M. D. Kittell, Cambria; J. J. Buckley; Delaware; John B. Henning, Wyoming, and F. B. Isherwood, McKean.

Leased Lyric Theatre.

Harry Harper, of Centre Hall, has leased the Lyric moving picture theatre from Robert Brandman, and will conduct it in the future.

W. L. DAGGETT ELECTED MEMBER BORO. COUNCIL

Chosen For Vacancy Caused by Resignation of George S. Grimm.

GOOD MAN FOR THE JOB

Solicitor Directed to File Liens for Unpaid Street Paving Bills—To Hear Water Appeals May 10—Curb Market Opens Next Saturday.

It is now Councilman Wells L. Daggett Most persons in Bellefonte will no doubt be at a loss to figure out who happens to be Wells L. Daggett. In order that everybody might at once know who we mean we should have said that it is now Councilman W. L. Daggett, for the ever-smiling, always-genial and popular proprietor of the Bush House is familiarly known as "W. L." His first name is "Wells," but he prefers the shorter and more easily pronounced "W. L." and as such he is best known.

Several weeks ago George S. Grimm, of the West Ward, resigned from Council, due to his leaving town to accept a position at Punxsutawney. On Monday night Council formally filled the vacancy. W. L. Daggett was accorded the honor of a unanimous election. He will fill out the unexpired term of Mr. Grimm, or until January 1st, 1914. President Keller at once appointed Mr. Daggett to serve on the several committees of which Mr. Grimm had been a member.

The selection of Mr. Daggett for the vacancy is indeed a good one. Everybody knows him, everybody likes him, and his numerous friends are more than pleased with his selection. He is a citizen who is deeply interested in the welfare and development of Bellefonte. As a downtown business man he is thoroughly posted on the needs of this important section of the business part of the borough. "The Republican" extends congratulations to not only the new member of Council, but also to his colleagues who chose him for the honor.

Council, at its regular meeting disposed of a mass of business, most of it was of a routine character. One of the most important actions taken was to instruct the borough solicitor to enter liens, on or before May 20th, on properties to protect the borough where persons have not paid their portion of the paving along the new State highway through town. The total of such charges against property owners was about $5400, of which amount $4000 has been paid. Of the outstanding balance of $1400, representing upward of fifty individual accounts, or charges, it is estimated that probably one-half can be collected without resort to legal proceedings.

Council formally accepted the proposition of J. McC. Davis, proprietor of the Garman House, for the building of a brick crossing between the hotel and the Court House. Mr. Davis offered to furnish the material, the borough to do the work.

Water appeals will be heard in Council chamber on the evening of Friday, May 10th, at 7 o'clock. Public attention is called to this meeting.

Chairman Beezer, of the Market Committee, announced that the curb market will be opened for the summer in Bellefonte on Saturday, May 11th.

President Keller announced the appointment of A. Miles Barr as an auditor to examine the accounts of the Pruner Orphanage during the last year. Mr. Barr is an expert accountant and is especially well qualified for the work assigned to him.

The Special Committee, which has charge of all matters pertaining to electric and power propositions before Council, was authorized to lease the Green Mill, at Milesburg, to Mr. Carr, of that place, subject to his willingness to vacate on notice. Such a lease is regarded as necessary in view of the likelihood that the property will be sold almost any day to the Bellefonte Electric Company.

Taking note of a letter received from Joseph J. Rhoads, of Altoona, Council directed the Street Committee and the borough engineer to recommend some plan for adjusting certain existing differences between the borough and the Rhoads estate as a result of the building of the State road on West Linn Street.

Borough Treasurer Gehret reported a balance in the treasury, May 1, 1912, of $239.90. The Finance Committee recommended the issuing of notes for $3700 and and $8000, respectively, to lift notes for $3700 and $7000, the $1000 additional being to cover current expenses. Notes for these amounts were ordered drawn.

LIGTHNING SPLITS CHILD'S FOOT

Fiery Bolt Terribly Injures Myrtle Lucas at McCoy-Linn Iron Works.

During yesterday afternoon's severe electric storm, lightning struck the home of Samuel Lucas at the McCoy-Linn Iron Works, the bolt passing down the chimney and shooting across the floor badly injured both feet of Mr. Lucas' 6-years old daughter, Myrtle. One of her feet was split from heel to instep. The other foot was not so badly injured.

The remarkable feature of the accident was that the child was not killed and the house burned to the ground.

The child was sitting on a couch, near by a cradle. Without the slightest warning the bolt of lightening tore through the chimney, ripping out plaster, and then shot across the floor, tearing up the boards as if they were so many toothpicks. The little girl's feet happened to be in the path of the lightning.

Dr. R. G. Haves, who was summoned made a hasty examination and directed that the child be removed to the hospital where her injuriess were dressed.

Bought Big Timber Tract.

D. O. Downing, of near Martha, one of Centre County's energetic and enterprising young farmers and business men, on Monday purchased from Budd Thompson a tract of 750 acres of timberland, located at Martha, on the ridge side. Mr. Downing and Mr. Thompson were in Bellefonte on Monday afternoon and closed the deal. The timber on the tract is chiefly oak. Mr. Downing expects to start operations cutting the timber in the next few days and will put to work a crew of about fifteen men. The operation will give employment to that number of men for many months to come.

New Store at College.

Sim the Clothier in addition to conducting his big store in Bellefonte will next week open a branch store at State College. He has rented the room in the Nittany Inn block, formerly occupied by Pierce brothers, and will next week open for business with a full line of clothing and men's furnishings. The store room will be fitted up temporarily to accommodate the annual commencement trade, but during the summer the room will be remodeled and equipped on an elaborate scale. Mr. Baum's plans calling for establishing a permanent store at State College. It is his idea to equip the State College store along the same modern lines of his big store in Bellefonte.

Caught 26-Inch Trout.

The Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin says that what is believed to be the largest brown trout ever brought into Williamsport from streams adjacent to that city, was carried in triumph through the streets there last Friday afternoon by John Siegel. The fish measured exactly 26½ inches in length and weighed 5 pounds 2 ounces. It was caught in the Big Sock, below Hillsgrove. Horace Sherman, who was with Mr. Siegel, had another brown trout which was 18 inches long. Besides these big fish both men caught the limit, in smaller trout.

Daniel Heckman Stricken.

The venerable Ex-County Commissioner Daniel Heckman is critically ill at his home on Lamb Street. While out in the garden with Mrs. Heckman picking flowers on Wednesday morning, Mr. Heckman suffered a stroke of paralysis. He was removed into his home and physicians summoned. His condition was at once seen to be so alarming that the attending physicians were unable to say that he would recover. Mr. Heckman is 68 years old.

BELLEFONTE MAY HAVE NEW STREET LIGHTING

Old Arc Lamps Scheduled to Disappear if Plans Materialize.

USE ELECTRIC GLOBES

Installation of Modern System Said to be Included in Proposition of Bellefonte Electric to Take Over Green Mill at Milesburg.

The antequated arc lamp system for street lighting seems destined to be relegated to the rear in Bellefonte, to be supplanted by the more modern system of electric globes.

A generally new lighting system for Bellefonte is under consideration and some developments may be looked for in the reasonably near future. The plan for street lighting is a part of a general proposition submitted, or to be submitted, by the Bellefonte Electric Company. When formally announced it will be found that the proposed system does away entirely with the present arrangement of arc lamps.

The changing of the street lighting system is understood to be involved in the proposition which provides for the sale by the borough to the Bellefonte Electric Company of the old Green mill property at Milesburg. That the Bellefonte Electric contemplated purchasing the Green mill was announced some time ago in "The Republican."

The various details of the plan proposed, or to be proposed, by the Bellefonte Electric have not been made known to the public, although it is understood that the plan is pretty well understood in a general way by members of Council. The fact that a change in the street lighting system is under consideration developed at Monday night's meeting of Council, at which time Mr. Beezer stated that George T. Bush desired to have two additional side-street electric lamps installed on West High Street, one in front of the main entrance to the Bush House and the other at the main entrance to the McClain block, on the opposite side of the street. Mr. Bush offered to pay for the posts, asking that the borough pay for the lighting. Our understanding is that when the same pattern of street lamps were installed on Allegheny Street such additional posts were included on the basis proposed by Mr. Bush. Mr. Brockerhoff opposed the Bush proposition, saying that there are already too many private street lamps in the borough. It was at this juncture that President Keller let it be known that a general overhauling of street lighting was under consideration and that when installed it might be so arranged as to include the two lights desired by the Bush estate. Mr. Bush has decided, notwithstanding the action of Council, to erect the two poles in question. Once the poles are up it is the belief of downtown business men that the question of furnishing the lighting will adjust itself.

Karthaus Brick Works Sold.

The Karthaus brick works, of which J. H. Miller, of Lock Haven, is superintendent, has been purchased by the General Refractories Company. Regarding the transfer of this valuable property the Philipsburg Journal says:

J. H. France, of this city, general superintendent and one of the heaviest stockholders of the General Refractories Company, having fire brick plants at Sandy Ridge, Blue Ball, Claysburg and in Kentucky, closed negotiations Friday by which his company has taken over the plant of the Karthaus Fire Brick corporation, including 623 acres of valuable fire clay lands.

The plant in question, with a capacity of 30,000 brick per day, was constructed some few years ago. The concern manufactures a high grade of brick and is a valuable property.

Mr. France, accompanied by D. Ross Wynn, who is also prominently connected with the corporation, went to Karthaus Saturday morning to take possession of the plant. Some extensive changes or improvements will be made in due time with a view of increasing the capacity of the plant to 60,000 brick per day.

Injured By Falling Tree.

John Stevens, of Port Matilda, while working on a lumber job near Bald Eagle on Monday, was caught under a falling tree and sustained a compound fracture of his left leg. The weight of the tree held him a prisoner until he could be released by fellow-workmen. He was removed to the Philipsburg hospital.

Flinn Challenges An Editor.

Ex-Senator William Flinn, of Pittsburg, who seized control of the Republican organization in Pennsylvania by taking up the cause for Roosevelt, and who was chosen to succeed Senator Penrose in the Republican National Committee, on Monday issued an open challenge to George W. Ochs, editor and publisher of the Philadelphia "Ledger" to a public debate on the virtues of the Republican State platform. The Philadelphia "Ledger" severely criticised the platform, and Flinn thereupon addressed to Mr. Ochs the following challenge:

"My attention has been called to the editorial expressions in your paper concerning the platform adopted by the Republican State Convention. Your paper characterizes the platform in such terms as 'Socialistic creed,' 'Base and dangerous appeal to the reckless,' 'Desperate and unscrupulous incitement to unrest,' 'Jumble of pestiferous nonsense,' 'Sheer drivel,' 'Insult to Republicanism,' 'Crazy proposition,' 'Product of shallow-brained theories,' etc.

"These highly seasoned adjectives and superlative phrases indicate either a lack of understanding of the principles enunciated in the platform, or a fear that the determination of the people upon carrying these principles into governmental action will have a disciplinary effect upon the special-privilege classes which your paper is so zealous in serving.

"You are, I am informed, an experienced public speaker, and upon several occasions, notably at a recent Lincoln Club dinner, in conjunction with Senator Penrose, vigorously discussed a number of questions raised by Colonel Roosevelt. Inasmuch as you possessed this equipment, it suggests itself to me that I could with fairness challenge you to debate, and that you would willingly avail yourself of an opportunity to spread the gospel of education upon the questions with which you have dealt with such emphasis."

Flinn, in conclusion, suggested that the debate be held in either the Metropolitan Opera House or the Academy of Music, in Philadelphia, and proposed that they equally divide the expense. Mr. Ochs has thus far not given his reply.

C. H. Wildmann, 143½ Bedford St., Cumberland, Md., writes: "I have used Foley Kidney Pills and find them all O. K. I had tried other remedies but Foley Kidney Pills are the best medicine I ever used." They are tonic in action and give quick and permanent benefit. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

To Destroy Household Pests.

At this time of the year many persons who are moving into buildings find them already tenanted by small but quite objectionable inhabitants. As a consequence the appeals to Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist, at Harrisburg, for information, during this particular season on the subject of destroying household pests, and especially bed bugs, are quite numerous. As a general reply for such information he has prepared the following letter:

"There are two methods of destroying bed bugs. One is to apply thoroughly alcoholic solution of bichloride of mercury or, in other words, corrosive sublimate. This is not only extremely poisonous, but fatal to pests. It kills them whenever it touches them. It can be put into an oil can and injected into the cracks and crevices, if immediately after using it the can is emptied and washed well, rinsed with water, and then oiled or filled with oil to prevent further action of the corrosive material. It cannot be kept in a metal oil can for a long time, because it will readily corrode the metal and eat its way through. It can be kept in a bottle, and when you wish to use it transfer it to a spring bottom oil can, and inject it where you wish. You need not be afraid to use this material freely, even though it is rank poison when taken internally.

"The other means, which is certain to get rid of bed bugs, is to fumigate thoroughly with hydrocyanic acid gas. This deadly gas is made by dropping potassium cyanide, or so-called prussic acid, into sulfuric and water, in a tightly closed room, and going out instantly, so that the operator will not breathe it in the least. It does dot injure any fabric, metal, food or other material, although it will kill living plants, animals and insects of all kinds when used at the proper strength.

"While it is safe to use, it must be used with considerable care, and for this reason an article was prepared entitled "Household Fumingation," which was published in one of the Monthly Bulletins of the Division of Zoology, and is sent free to persons desiring it. Minute directions are therein given. This is the most absolutely certain method of getting rid of bed bugs and other household pests. It is rather expensive, but it cleans the house completely and is satisfactory. I have fumigated several houses, mills, warehouses, etc., in our experimental work, and know whereof I speak in saying that it is effective."

Why a Man Likes a Dog.

"Why does a man like a dog?" responded the suffragette lady, fiercely, and repeated: "Why does a man like a dog? Well, there are numerous reasons, though a dog is not a reasoning being. A dog will lick the hand that beats it; a dog will eat crust and a bone and bless the giver; a dog thinks whatever a man does is right and proper; a dog has no rights that a man is bound to respect; a dog asks no embarrassing questions; a dog is always grateful, no matter for what; a dog does not ask the man to stay at home nights; a dog is satisfied to love the man, whether the man loves the dog or not; a dog submits to any and all impositions without protest; a dog does not consider itself a man's equal; a dog lets a man have his own way; a dog doesn't want to vote; a dog is just as glad to see a man when he gets in at 3 o'clock in the morning, almost helpless, as if he hadn't gone out at all; a dog has no mother in sight, and a dog can't talk back, mind you, nor won't talk back. That is why a man likes a dog."

Abandon Lynching Cases.

The lynching of Zach Walker at Coatesville, on the night of August 13, 1911, when he was burned after he had been arrested for the killing of a special policeman, probably will go unpunished, despite the unusual efforts made by the state of Pennsylvania to bring to justice the leaders of the mob.

After a jury had brought in a verdict of not guilty at West Chester, last Friday, in the case of Lewis Denithorne, one of the six men accused of participating in the lynching, who had not yet been tried the commonwealth asked for the acquittal of the other five defendants. The accused men were then discharged. Among them were Chief of Police Umsted of Coatesville and Stanley Howe, a policeman, who were charged with manslaughter and neglect of their duties.

The commonwealth's reason for asking for the acquittals was that it was unable to obtain convictions because of the state of mind of the people of the county. Last fall six men were acquitted by juries. Then the commonwealth sought a change of venue, which was denied.

In dismissing the cases Judge Butler made a scathing address from the bench, in which he deplored the condition of the public mind in Chester county. He added that at the outset of the trials he had anticipated no trouble in procuring jurors to act, because of what he supposed was an incensed state of feeling against the perpetrators of the lynching. He regarded the outcome of the trials as a public calamity to the law and order of the state.

Charles Wright, 1512 French St., Wilmington, Del., recovered from a severe attack of rheumatism caused by rheumatism and says: "The rheumatic pains kept me awake at night but after taking Foley Kidney Pills the pain lessened and soon I was able to sleep all night, and I am cured of all kidney trouble." A Turn for the Better in Crops.

Bradstreet's Report says that good rains in Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma with warmer growing weather in other states are responsible for a slightly more optimistic tone of winter-wheat crop reports. The reports from Kansas are really very good in view of past depressing advices. Large areas have been winter-killed, but the condition of that remaining is better than a year ago, and the area is certainly larger. In Nebraska improvement is noted, as also in Oklahoma. In Missouri conditions are mixed, but in the southern half of the state and in parts of Illinois things have improved. In Ohio, however, the winter-wheat prospect is the poorest in years, and in Indiana, Michigan and Illinois prospects as a whole are not good. In the Pacific and Atlantic coast states—notably Washington and Oregon in the west, and New York, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia in the east—winter wheat looks well.

Except in parts of North Dakota, where too much rain retards spring-wheat seeding, the latter crop is very generally seeded, and some of it coming up with a good stand and color.

A very encouraging feature this year, in view of the famine prices for hay, is the very generally good reports coming in as to grass lands.

Oats seeding is about finished in the west but very backward in the eastern states. Owing to wet soil, a great deal of land that was to be seeded to oats will be plowed for corn. Complaints of oats seed rotting in the soil are very common in the west. Corn plowing and planting is backward, but good weather can repair some of this damage, though that and other crops are very backward.

Reports of many spring pigs being killed by cold, wet weather are common in the west.

At the south cotton planting is very backward, Texas sending about the best reports. Heavy rains in the lower Mississippi valley are not a favorable feature, and little work has been done in Louisiana and Mississippi, except in the uplands. A break in the levee on the west bank of the Mississippi has flooded much of the sugar lands of Louisiana and destroyed much property. Reports as to cotton planting in Alabama and Georgia are very depressing. As an example of what the cotton planter has had to meet this spring, it might be noted that forty-three inches of rain fell at Montgomery, Ala., in four months, whereas the normal rainfall for an entire year is fifty-one inches.

State Hens Produce Millions.

In a bulletin just issued the State Department of Agriculture estimates that the total value of the poultry product of Pennsylvania is $30,000,000 a year. "If each hen within the State could be made to lay only one more dozen winter eggs, at an average price of 33⅓ cents per dozen, the return would be yearly about $5,000,000," says the bulletin.

Census figures show poultry made the greatest increase in value of any farm product between 1900 and 1910. "And yet," says the bulletin, "the largest increase in both number and value of the poultry has undoubtedly been among the village, town and city poultry people within this period. The census took no account whatever of this poultry. If there are some 200,000 farms keeping poultry, there are certainly several times that number of people keeping poultry in the towns, and if the average size of the town flock is not as large as the farm flock the total number is likely to be as large and of as much value."

Domestic animals on Pennsylvania farms are valued at $141,371,000. Poultry is valued at $7,674,000, a gain of 71.2 per cent in value since 1900. The gain in numbers is 15.2 per cent. Of 218,391 farms in the State 205,158 are keeping poultry. There are 11,895,903 chickens, valued at $7,020,000, averaging 60 cents each. The average number to a farm is 68. Other figures are as follows: 40,126 farms have 163,777 ducks, valued at $112,000; 13,300 farms have 40,318 geese, valued at $66,500; 24,025 farms have 111,715 guinea fowls, valued at $48,200, and 6,161 farms have pigeons, valued at $111,000.

The bulletin reports that chicken raising has proved so attractive in the city that it has stimulated the growing of fancy and improved stock in the country districts, and resulted also in heavy importations.

Doctors in United States.

To one who observes the considerable number of physicians' signs in the average city or large town the report of the last census that there are in the United States only 130,000 physicians, including osteopaths, psychopaths, hydropaths and doctors of every description, may come as a revelation and a surprise. The additional information, afforded by the census, that this country has only one doctor to every 650 of its population is not likely to relieve the observer's wonderment until he reflects that a physician to every 650 people is, after all, a fairly liberal safeguard to the public health, says the Manchester Union. The figures, of course, represent the average the country over, some sections of communities having fewer doctors in proportion to their population and some having more. Manchester, for instance, on the basis of the census figures, would have 107 or 108 physicians. The city directory gives 98. The census report on the matter is not incredible, yet a person traveling along the streets of almost any New England city and remarking the numerous doctors' "shingles" would have been almost certain to estimate the percentage of doctors higher than that given by the census.

Governor Paid Auto Fine.

Governor Tener last week sent to the Reading autorities, who had entered suit against the owner of automobile license No. 1 for exceeding the speed limit, his personal check for $11.25. The Governor was served with a notice that the chauffeur operating his car had gone faster than the law allows in Reading. Accompanying the check was a letter stating that while the State, the owner of the car, could not be sued, the Governor desired to live up to the law. It was stated that there was no intention to exceed the limit and that he had gone through the town a dozen times at the same speed before while on business for the State, but no notice was ever given to him.

Favor Coining 3-cent Pieces.

So strong were the reasons advanced for the coinage of a three-cent piece in the report of the House Committee on coinage, weight and measures, submitted last Friday by Representative William A. Ashbrook, of Ohio, that the passage of the bill by both House and Senate at this session seems likely. Senator Pemerene, of Ohio, expects to offer a similar bill in the Senate.

The House bill also carries provisions for the coinage of a one-half cent piece and provides that both of the new coins as well as the present one-cent-piece shall be made of seventy-five percent, copper and twenty-five per cent. nickel, which is the same composition which for many years has been used in the five cent piece.

Franklin MacVeagh, Secretary of the Treasury, has given his approval to the bill, which was originally introduced by Representative Robert J. Bulkley, of Ohio. Heretofore the Treasury Department has been opposed to these new coins on the ground that they would not be easily distinguishable from the ten-cen piece. The committee decided to leave the diameter, shape and designs of the new coins to the Treasury Department.

George Roberts, Director of the Mintt has suggested that one be made with a scalloped edge like the one-anna piece of India, and that the other be perforated, like some of the Chinese coins.

Broke the Record.

The State Highway Department last week issued automobile license tag No. 20,000 and broke all records for putting out the number plates which are evidence of registration. The issue is only 4,272 behind the total registration of cars last year and as 34,351 was the total of 1909, the best previons year, it is evident that the people of Pennsylvania are spending large sums for automobiles and that the use of the vehicle is growing tremendously. It is believed that the 50,000 mark will be passed this year.

The 40,000 cars licensed do not include those for dealers, which are in a separate classification and about 3,000 of which have been issued.

The automobile registrations have brought in approximately $400,000, allowing $10 for a car, which is a fair average, and this money together with the $1,400,000 realized from registration in previous years, will likely be appropriated by the Highway Department for road building purposes. Such was the very evident intent of the legislature in 1908 and 1909, but, owing to the wording of the specific appropriations act of 1909, Auditor General Sisson has ruled that acts particularly mentioning the sums and the period covered must be passed before the road constructing department can obtain the use of the money. The result has been to tie up considerable road work on the State aid plan which it was hoped to construct this summer.

Diamond Cleaving.

The art of the lapidary is one of the most delicate employments of mechanical force known. The practical diamond cutter learns many facts about precious stones which are sealed books even to mineralogists. For instance, it is the lapidaries who have found out that diamonds coming from the different districts vary remarkably in their degrees of hardness. It appears that the hardest diamonds come from New South Wales. An unfamiliar fact is that diamonds are made to assume approximately the required shape by slitting and cleaving and by "bruting," which is the rubbing of one diamond against another, before they are submitted to the polishing wheel. In cleaving the diamond is cemented on the end of a wooden stick and a steel blade is driven with a smart blow in the direction of the natural plane of cleavage. Diamonds that have been cut by the lapidary's wheel lack some of the brilliance possessed by those that have simply been cleaved.—New York Press.

Good Weight.

One trick of the trade was taught to the young butcher by the marketman who gave him his first employment. The old dealer pointed to trays of beef, lamb and pork trimmings beneath the counter.

"When customers ask to have all the waste that has been cut from their own meat wrapped up with their order be sure to put in a few of these trimmings besides," he said. "Most always they want the scraps sent home so they can weigh the whole business and find out whether they are getting full weight or not. Enough extra pieces to tip the scales half an ounce beyond the supposed weight won't hurt anybody and will give us a good name."

Shortly after that the new clerk heard one frugal housewife say to another: "Oh, why don't you trade at Blank's? He gives such good measure, often almost an ounce more than you pay for."

The clerk smiled.—Washington Star.

Why Men Went West.

A hundred years ago the Rev. Timothy Dwight commented complacently on the benefit to Connecticut from the draining away to the frontier—then western New York—of the restless spirits who chafed under the rule of the old families and the Congregational clergy, writes Professor Edward Alsworth Ross in the Century. It never occurred to him that these insurgent spirits were carrying with them to the wilderness a precious energy and initiative. The unprosperous, the shiftless and the migratory sought the frontier, to be sure, but the enterprising, too, were attracted by it. The timorous and cautious stayed and accepted the cramping conditions of an old society, but those who dared take chances, to "place a bet on themselves," were apt to catch the western fever.

Precedent Nobly Ignored.

Had no important step been taken by the leaders of the Revolution for which a precedent could not be discovered—no government established of which an exact model did not present itself—the people of the United States might at this moment have been numbered among the melancholy victims of misguided councils; must at best have been laboring under the weight of some of those forms which have crushed the liberties of the rest of mankind. Happily for America—happily we trust for the whole human race—they pursued a new and more noble course.—James Madison.

The Judge's Advice.

The prisoner being without an advocate and the charge being one of murder, the judge asked a junior barrister to act as his counsel. The barrister did his best and at lunchtime privately asked the judge whether he should make a long speech for the defense or a short one.

"As long as you can make it," said his lordship enigmatically, "for that's the only chance the prisoner has of lengthening his life."—London Opinion.

The Good Old Days Long Gone.

A well known Bostonian recently found in his trunk an old diary with this entry: "Aug. 10, 1887. Went to the railroad station to see my sister off, and by some chance Harry Blank was there to see his sister off, and in the rush and noise and confusion we got mixed and I hugged his sister and he hugged mine."—Boston Transcript.

The Tribute of the Powhatans.

What is perhaps the most interesting ceremony to be witnessed in the United States takes place at the state capitol at Richmond on Feb. 16 of each year. It consists of the delivery of the annual tribute of the Pamunkey river Indians, representing a surviving tribe of the Powhatan nation, to the governor of Virginia. The manner of the presentation of the tribute is simple. The chief and the head men of the tribe upon the appointed day appear at the capitol bearing baskets of ducks and fish and lay the baskets at the feet of the governor. The few and simple words which are spoken are traditional and do not vary. Originally the tribute consisted of venison, ducks and fish, each of the finest and representing the dominion of the state of Virginia over the animals of the forest, the birds of the air and the fish of the waters, but the state law establishing a closed season for deer now prevents the Indians, from including venison in the tribute.—Harper's.

Beck's Narrow Escape.

David Beck, the celebrated portrait painter and pupil of Van Dyck, while traveling through Germany was suddenly taken ill and to all appearances died and was laid out a corpse. His servants, sitting around the bed, grieved heartily for the loss of so good a master and, as grief is thirsty, drank as heartily at the same time. One of them, becoming more befuddled than the rest, then addressed his companions thus: "Our master when alive was fond of his glass. Let us out of gratitude, then, give him one now he is dead." Assent was given. The head of the dead painter was raised up and some wine poured down or spilled about, the fragrance or spirit of which caused Beck to open his eyes, upon which the servant, who, being drunk, half forgetting his master was dead, forced down the remainder of the glass. The painter gradually revived and thus escaped a living interment.

To Escape Gold Bricks.

A man or a woman with funds to invest should make it a primary principle to first consult an experienced banking house of established reputation. The first step in the prudent investment of your money is the selection of your banking house. You should choose a banker not only willing but competent to serve your every need—one with the requisite patience and sympathy to study your investment problem from all angles, to make your problem his problem. Few investors realize that within the past few years there has sprung up a new guild in the banking business, bankers whose business runs well over $100,000,000 annually and whose success is largely due to the faithful and thoughtful attention given each serious inquiry or request for advice. If you can save and invest $100 or more each year you can command the best financial brains in America.—Charles E. Merrill in Leslie's.

An Astronomer's Wit.

Professor Adams of Cambridge university, England, who discovered the planet Neptune, was a distinguished proof that a man may have his head among the clouds and still keep a ready wit for mundane occasions. At a dinner of the Philosophical society, runs a contribution to the Cornhill Magazine, one of the company was concluding an after dinner speech about the activities of the society for the past year. He pointed to the book of the proceedings lying on the table near him, adding:

"But of all the proceedings this year, gentlemen, you will agree with me that one of the best is this [waving his hand at the assembled diners] philosophical proceeding."

"Illustrated with plates!" flashed out Professor Adams to his neighbor at the table.

"Ma," said little Harry, "I'll tell you what you ought to do."

"What, dear?" his mother asked.

"You ought to go over to live in some country where the people are Mohammedans."

"What on earth ever put such a thought as that into your dear head, darling?"

"'Cause over there they think all fat women are beautiful."

"Harry, if you dare to open your mouth again this evening you will be sent to bed with nothing to eat!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

More Exactly Stated.

Jamie, having come into the possession of considerable wealth through the death of relatives, was thus addressed by one of the neighbors:

"Aye, Jamie, it was a guid thing for you that your rich freens waur born afore ye."

"Weel," said Jamie, "I'm nae sae sure aboot that, but it was a guid thing that they dee'd afore me."—London Tit-Bits.

A Good Scheme.

Husband—Why do you scold the butcher? It isn't his fault that the meat comes to the table all dried up. Scold the cook. Wife—I don't dare to, but I'm in hopes that if I keep on scolding the butcher he'll get mad and come around and scold the cook.

Amazed.

Newman—I met your wife today for the first time, and, for one thing, I found she was outspoken. Henpeck—You surprise me! By whom?—Philadelphia Press.

Puffed Up.

Post—Thinks he's the whole thing, doesn't he? Parker—Well, I'd hardly go as far as that, but he certainly considers himself a quorum.—Smart Set.

19 Teaspoons in His Stomach.

A surgical operation has just been found necessary to recover a lot of teaspoons which disappeared one at a time from a ward of the eastern Maine insane hospital at Bangor, Maine. When the mystery was solved by the discovery that one of the patients was swallowing the missing articles, Doctors W. C. Mason and E. B. Sanger recovered from the man's stomach nineteen teaspoons. Seventeen of them belonged to the hospital and two had presumably been swallowed before the man was committed.

The Stars in the Flag.

An official order for changing the stars of the national ensign and the union jack in use by the navy to show the addition of two new states to the Union has been issued by the navy department. The change, which takes effect on July 4, provides for forty-eight stars to be arranged in six rows of eight each, with the corresponding stars of each row in a vertical line. This arrangement is the one recommended by the joint board of the army and navy and approved by President Taft.

Killed White Mountain Mink.

Edward Kephart, residing about one mile west of Blue Ball, killed a white mountain mink which was at the time making a visit to his chicken coop. Silas Reese, who saw the mink soon after it had been shot, tells us that it was as large as a good-sized rabbit. Its fur is very beautiful, and it is the purpose of Mr. Kephart to have it mounted by a taxidermist. The white mink is rarely found in this section of the country.—Philipsburg Journal.

T. R. Applauds Penna. Platform.

The platform adopted by the Republican State Convention in Pennsylvania pleased Colonel Roosevelt so greatly that he dictated this statement:

"I am greatly pleased with the platform of the Pennsylvania Republican party. I cannot sufficiently congratulate Pennsylvania upon now having taken the position of leadership in the great movement to give the people the real right to rule themselves, and for efficiently and practically securing justice, both politically and socially."

The Old Fashioned Ones.

What has become of the old fashioned man whose shoes squeaked as he walked cautiously down the church aisle? And the man who could hear a cowbell in the distance and determine by the sound of the bell whether Blossom was grazing or coming home? And the girl, wearing a bonnet—a real cloth bonnet, not a hat—who swept the yard Saturday afternoon in anticipation of Sunday company? And the schoolboy who used a slate as a bookshelf between the schoolhouse and the home? And the housewife who knew how many holes a quilting frame should have? And the man who set a steel trap in the smokehouse? And the girl who never got on the left side of a cow to milk her? And the boy who carved his initials on a sweet gum tree and watched the letters disappear by the time he put on long pants? And the young man who tipped his hat to his elders? And the boy who went possum hunting with a negro on Friday night, winding up in a forbidden cane patch about 11 o'clock?—Montgomery Advertiser

O, you, Boss Kurtz?

Same old mule, but with a new bunch of bosses.

Having swiped all the bacon the "Centre Democrat" will proceed to preach brotherly love, faith, and charity, to say nothing of prayers for the meek and the lowly.

A political machine is a machine when some other fellow runs it. Itsan organization when the other fellow doesn't have a chance to run it.

P. Gray Meek got his picture in the papers at Harrisburg the first day but Kurtzie got his in the second day, which was the day for advertising the real bosses.

And now the Democratic regulars are saying that Kurtzie was afraid to go before the Democrats of this district as a candidate for national delegate, wisely concluding to slip under the big tent at Harrisburg.

Harrisburg has had many a demonstration of the steam roller in action, but never one where the roller was used more effectively than at Harrisburg on Tuesday. And the roller did its rolling in the name of Democratic reform.

Regardless of the merits of the Democratic family row, here's looking at Colonel Guffey on the manner in which he stood up and took his licking at Harrisburg. He's a game sport, and that's more than can be said about some of those who administered the said licking.

Talk about your machines. When the Resolutions Committee met during the recess of the Democratic State Convention to draft a platform, with Congressman Palmer presiding, an inquisitive member of the committee forced Mr. Palmer to admit that the platform had already been prepared and copies furnished to newspapers.

The Jim Schofields, the Hughie Taylors, the P. Gray Meeks and the Johnnie Nolls are all cordially invited to assemble in front of the "Centre Democrat" office any evening suiting their leisure and serenade Charley Kurtz, their new boss, on his election by the State convention as a delegate-at-large to the Baltimore convention. What?

That was a mean trick played by Charley Kurtz on Brother P. Gray Meek. After going the limit to help defeat Meek for national delegate in this district, Kurtz went down to Harrisburg and just to rub it in had himself elected a national delegate-at-large. The meanest part about it was that Kurtz pulled off the trick while Meek was present and looking on. Now who's the Democratic boss in Centre County?

The Philadelphia "Record," the leading Democratic newspaper in Pennsylvania, in describing the reorganizers' victory at Harrisburg said that the Charley Kurtz crowd at their caucus on the night before the convention adopted the unit rule "to carry out the program adopted and for the slate made by the new bosses, who have heretofore been vigorous in their denunciation of bosses and boss rule."

NEXT?

A few weeks ago the Democratic Board of County Auditors treated the law with scant concern and elected a clerk at $3 per day. The law makes no provision for such a luxury for the Board of County Auditors, who are supposed to be competent and willing to do their own work.

More recently John D. Miller, the Democratic County Treasurer, deliberately and knowingly ignored the law requiring him to advertise unseated land sales in ALL the newspapers in the county. He violated the law because that law interfered with his personal plans to favor a certain few newspapers. There wasn't any accident about the matter. He was perfectly familiar with the requirements of the law, but chose to take a chance and violate it. The Philipsburg "Ledger" publicly announces that Mr. Miller did not place with, or offer to place with, that newspaper his unseated land sales, thus corroborating "The Republican's" charge that the Democratic County Treasurer did not comply with the law. Had Treasurer Miller acted innocently, or even ignorantly, in the matter there would be some excuse for his course We understand that what he did he did knowingly and intentionally, and therefore the full responsibility is squarely up to him.

The people of Centre County last November voted for a change in things at the Court House. Surely they are getting it, even if it is not what they voted for and expected.

"The Republican" would again suggest to Council that a sidewalk be laid on West Lamb Street between the Spring creek bridge and the Bellefonte Electric Company plant. In wet weather persons traveling along that street are compelled to wade in mud up to their ankles. In dry weather they are forced to plow through several inches of dust. The building of a sidewalk at the point in question may mean little to persons whose business does not necessitate their traveling along West Lamb Street, but to those who do use that street from day to day the proposed improvement is of the greatest importance. For some unknown reason the section of street complained of has not only been sadly neglected, but the borough authorities have never insisted on a change for the better.

That was a clever trick of the Old Guard in slipping through the Democratic State convention a resolution binding the Pennsylvania delegation to support Wilson for President so long as his name is before the Baltimore convention. The prime object in gaining control at Harrisburg was to be in position to sell out to the winner at Baltimore. With Wilson's boom all but collapsed the bosses of the new Democratic machine in Pennsylvania will go to Baltimore with 76 votes to deliver, but unable to deliver them to anybody but Wilson. The bosses of the new machine really want to flop to Champ Clark, but through the cunning of the Old Guard the 76 delegates are sewed up in the Wilson bag.

The remains of the late John Walz, who passed away at the home of his son-in-law, Charles Packer, in Mill Hall, were brought here for interment last Friday. Burial was made in the Disciple cemetery at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the services being attended by many friends of the deceased.

Rev. W. H. Patterson on Sunday resigned his pastorate of the Disciple church, the same to take effect by September, or sooner if possible. He will take charge of a group of churches near Canton, Bradford County. Mr. Patterson announced his resignation at the Sunday morning service. Previous to that, however, the official board had met and adopted a minute strongly urging that he remain. This was done when it became known that he had received a call from Bradford. At the Sunday morning service the official board submitted its report to the congregation for approval The vote was by written ballot, and resulted in 72 votes being cast urging Mr. Patterson to remain, with 4 taking an opposite view. Despite this Mr. Patterson tendered his resignation with the request that it take effect not later than September 1st. His new pastorate will pay him $200 salary over and above what he now receives.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitution disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing the work. Bedouin's Three Treasures.

There are always three things uppermost in the Bedouin's mind—his gun, his horse and his wives. The most modern arms of precision have replaced the primitive spear which, until a few years ago, was the usual weapon. The Bedouin is quick to realize the efficiency of modern weapons and soon becomes an expert marksman. So much has the spear fallen out of favor that the bearer of one would be ridiculed in his own camp. Such pride has the Bedouin in his weapons that even in his leisure hours he sits fully armed, examining and cleaning each piece in turn, making himself accustomed to carrying their weight. No youth considers himself a man until he has fully equipped himself. A sword is much esteemed, but generally only as an heirloom and as giving distinction to the bearer. There are to be found many excellent blades among the sheiks, some with a history of hundreds of years, having been handed down from father to son.—Wide World Magazine.

Animals Attack the Lungs.

Watch any flesh eating animal when it is attacking its prey or watch two animals having a fight to the death. You will notice one remarkable fact, and that is that they strike for the lungs. Most people, of course, are well aware where their own lungs are, but they haven't the slightest idea about any other lungs. Animals instinctively know, however, the position of the lungs of almost every other animal. When a tiger or a lion attacks a man it does its best to get just below the shoulder blades. If it strikes without warning you will always find that its powerful paws have torn right through to the lungs. A cat has just the same instinct. It goes for the lungs—the vital spot—just the same as its bigger brothers. Watch it stalk a sparrow and you will see how cleverly it maneuvers so as to get behind the unfortunate bird and pounce on its back, where the lungs are.—London Graphic.

Shooting the Seal.

Seals are caught in a variety of ways, but they are very shy creatures and the greatest caution must be exercised in approaching them. Even when they have been struck by harpoon or rifle bullet the blow must be fatal and death instantaneous, or the animal will drop into its hole in the ice and be seen no more. Indeed, the fact that a seal seldom moves far from its hole adds considerably to the hunter's difficulties. The plan usually adopted by Eskimo hunters is to build up a kind of tent sledge. The sides and front are masked with bearskin, the top with the pelt of a hare. The native hides within this novel tent and inch by inch propels himself over the ice till he is near his quarry. The rifle with which he slays his seal is brought into use through a loophole in the sledge covering.

Our Unknown World.

Despite the marvelous advance of exploration in various parts of the globe, an estimate as submitted by a member of the Royal Geographical society in London shows that no less than 20,000,000 square miles of the earth's surface yet remain unexplored. The largest unexplored area is said to be that in Africa—6,500,000 miles—but even North America contains 1,500,000 square miles of virgin territory. It is surprising to learn that there are three times as much land awaiting the foot of the pioneer in North America as in South America.—Harper's.

Real Hard Luck.

"Speaking of hard luck," remarked an official, "I had some hard luck once during my early days."

"Elucidate," said another official.

"I had just invested my last $5 in a meal ticket."

"Yes, yes!"

"As I started down the street a gust of wind tore the ticket from my hand. A lumberjack was passing, wearing heavy, hobnailed boots."

"Yes; go on."

"And he stepped on my ticket and punched out $4.85."—Kansas City Journal.

To Save Money.

Mark Twain's rules for saving money when one was tempted to part with some of his treasure were simple. Here they are:

To save half when you are fired by an eager impulse to contribute to a charity, wait and count forty. To save three-quarters count sixty. To save it all count sixty-five.

Love.

Love is the most powerful of spells. Every other species of sorcery must yield to it. There is but one power against which it is helpless. What is that? It is not fire; it is not water; it is not air; it is not the earth with all its metals. It is time.—Heine.

What It Is.

"Well, Johnnie, I hear you have another baby at your house."

"Yep."

"What is it?"

"The nurse says it's a girl, but pa seems to think it's hard luck."—Chicago Record-Herald.

GRANT TO ROOSEVELT

Interesting Contest of 1880 Contrasted With the Present One.

There were 756 delegates in the Republican National convention of 1880 with 379 votes necessary to nominate.

On the first ballot Grant had 304 votes out of the 755 that were cast, leaving him within 74 of the necessary majority.

On the thirty-sixth ballot Grant had 306 votes out of the 755 that were cast, leaving him within seventy-two of the necessary majority. But James A. Garfield had 399 votes and was nominated for President.

Illinois had forty-two votes in the convention, and twenty-four of them went to Grant.

Pennsylvania had fifty-eight in the convention and thirty-two of them went to Grant.

Missouri had thirty votes in the convention and twenty-nine of them went to Grant.

These are now Roosevelt States, and Mr. Roosevelt's managers point to them as final proof that he will be nominated. Grant had a majority of the delegates from all three of them, and in addition he had fifty-one of New York's seventy delegates, with Roscoe Conkling, the manager of the Grant campaign as their chairman.

Mr. Roosevelt's friends expect to swing the southern delegates when the test of strength comes at Chicago. Grant had almost all the southern delegates thirty-two years ago, but Grant was not nominated for President.

Will the delegates who present Roosevelt's name at Chicago make a more appealing speech than that made by Conkling when he stepped to the front of the platform and began:—

When asked what State he hails from,
Our sole reply shall be:
"He comes from Appomattox
And its famous apple tree?"

Conkling with all his genius, with all his eloquence, with all of Grant's tremendous popularity and with 306 delegates behind him could not nominate Grant for a third term. Can Theodore Roosevelt do for himself what Roscoe Conkling could not do for Ulysses S. Grant?

To Test Powell's Nomination.

The nominee of the Democratic convention for Auditor General will be invited to join in the action contemplated to test the validity of an election of such an officer this year, and the proceedings for the suit have been halted by General A. E. Sisson with this object in view.

The action will be in the form of an injunction against the Secretary of the Commonwealth to restrain him from receiving the certificates of nominations for Auditor General on the ground that there is a grave question whether, under the circumstances attending the adoption of the constitutional amendments and the simultaneous election of General Sisson, an election can be held this year. General Sisson holds that he wants a decision before he turns over the office. It is his belief that he is entitled to more than three years.

The decision to invite the Democratic nominee to join will be to take away from the proceeding any idea that it is a party affair.

General Sisson be represented by Lyman D. Gilbert and F. W. Fleitz.

Says Richeson is a Mormon.

Clarence V. T. Richeson, under sentence of death for the murder of Avis Linnell, has been a Mormon elder and secretly connected with the Mormon organization for several years, although preaching from a Baptist pulpit, according to a sworn statement just made before William A. Thibodeau, an attorney, and justice of the peace, at Boston, Mass.

The author of the affidavit, Mrs. Louie E. Brittain, claims to have been formerly connected with the Mormon church and to have been a celestial wife of a New York man, who is at the head of the Mormon organization in the east.

Miraculious.

A lawyer was retained as a counsel for a man who stepped into a hole in the street and broke his leg. The verdict was in favor of his client. After settling up the claim, he handed his client a silver dollar.

"What is this for?" asked the man.

"That is what is left after taking out my fee, the cost of appeal, and other expenses."

The man regarded the dollar a moment, then looked at the lawyer "What is the matter with this?" he asked. "Is it bad?"—McCall's Magazine.

Roosevelt Toasts Flinn.

Colonel Roosevelt, at Oyster Bay on Monday night, tossed a boquet at Ex-Senator Flinn, of Pittsburg, saying:

"Have you read the Pennsylvania platform? Well, Mr. Flinn had something to say about that platform. It calls for the initiative, referendum and direct primaries. If that is the work of a boss, then that is the kind of a boss I like."

An Inheritance

Should It Go to the Church or to an Heir of the Third Generation?

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Mrs. Whitridge," said Mr. Trevor, "I have called to ask your assistance in a very important matter to me. You have six daughters, all of whom are well married. While I am willing to admit, madam, that these ladies are most attractive, I cannot but attribute something of the management of their matrimonial affairs to you."

"You are quite right, Mr. Trevor. Many of the best women in the world are not married, and many of the most undesirable are. I believe this is due more to a lack of management for the girls on the part of their mothers when they come to a marriageable age than any other cause. My daughters, as you say, are by no means unattractive, but the fact that they are all well and happily married is due far more to management than their own charms. What can I do for you, Mr. Trevor?"

"I have but one son, as you know—Arthur. I have spent my whole life in building up a fortune and from my boy's birth have set my heart in handing it down through him to my descendants. He disappointed me by taking orders and now, being very high church, has declared for celibacy and refuses to marry."

"I see. You wish me to take such measures as will break his resolution."

"If you will be so kind, Mrs. Whitridge, I would like you to throw in his way some young woman of fine character, of irreproachable reputation, of intellectual"—

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Trevor. I thought you said you wished me to manage the affair."

"So I do."

"Well, then, permit me to say that I think you must put up with a daughter-in-law of entirely different caliber from the kind you name or none at all. It does not strike me that such a woman would serve our purpose in the present case. I have known you for years and am sure no son of such a father can be reasoned or persuaded into changing a resolution, once made."

"How is he to be handled?"

"Bamboozled."

"You flatter me indirectly, Mrs. Whitridge."

"A strong man doesn't need a strong woman."

"I see."

"I have in mind a young lady who at school stood at the foot of her class, but as a flirt was at the head. She has had many offers, but if she is a fool at books she has practical sense enough to wish for an establishment when she marries. If you desire it I will endeavor, with your assistance, to make a match between your son and her."

"Any port in a storm. What I want is an heir of the third generation."

"Very well. To begin I shall invite you and your son to dinner. The young lady will be present. When you have left us tell your son that you have been much pleased with her and you wish she might become your daughter-in-law. He will demur, and you will insist. After a number of conversations on the matter you will tell him that either he must give up inheriting your fortune or marry the girl of your choice, provided, of course, that she will have him."

"He wishes my fortune for the purpose of building a cathedral."

"So much the better. I shall see something of him myself and perhaps may be able to make certain suggestions."

"For what purpose?"

"To entangle him."

These preliminary arrangements having been made, Mr. Trevor arose to go.

"By the bye, Mrs. Whitridge," he said, "I believe you are managing director of St. Luke's hospital."

"I am."

"You have not called on me for any help. I should esteem it a favor if you would permit me to send you a check."

"I should be very grateful."

"I will give you $10,000 now and $20,000"— he hesitated.

"On the first of the year?"

"No; on the day of my son's wedding."

"Thank you very much, Mr. Trevor. I think we understand each other. You will receive invitations for dinner within a few days."

The preliminaries to this scheme of inveiglement were carried out as they had been laid down by Mrs. Whitridge. Miss Annette Seaton, commonly called "Nan" by her intimate friends, was the girl selected by Mrs. Whitridge for drawing the Rev. Arthur Trevor from celibacy. A month passed, at the end of which it was reported that Mr. Trevor, Sr., had set his heart on Nan Seaton for a daughter-in-law, but his son objected naturally to one who was to be described in two words, "stupid" and "pretty." It was admitted that she had been fancied by men of her own caliber, but a match with one of the spiritual and intellectual power of Arthur Trevor was preposterous.

One day the clergyman called on Mrs. Whitridge for assistance. "My dear Mrs. Whitridge," he said, "by introducing father and me to Miss Seaton you are likely unintentionally to rob the church of a cathedral I propose to build with my inheritance. Father has taken a desperate fancy to her and wishes me to marry her."

"That's too bad. Does your father consider that the young lady may have other plans for her future?"

"Oh, yes; he says that if she won't have me he must give up his plan."

"And if she accepts?"

"In that event if I don't wed her father will disinherit me."

"And how can I help you?"

"You might say to Miss Seaton that by refusing me she will be instrumental in saving to the church the finest Episcopal cathedral on this continent."

"My dear Mr. Trevor, I would advise you to make yourself an appeal to Miss Seaton's higher nature. I know, though I suppose I should not tell you, that she admires you very much. That will make her sacrifice nobler."

"Do you really think that, Mrs. Whitridge?"

"I am sure of it. But I am violating a confidence in letting you know her feelings."

"And you advise me to tell Miss Seaton that this great work of mine depends upon her refusing an offer of marriage from me?"

"I do; but, of course, if you put her on her pride and she refuses you because you do not wish her on personal grounds your father will not consider that excusable in you."

"Certainly not. It is a very delicate matter to put to a young lady. That's why I come to you, hoping you would do it for me."

"I am sure your father would not be satisfied except by your making Miss Seaton a proposal, intimating that if you had not embraced the doctrine of celibacy you would be happy to have her accept you. It would also, I think, be legitimate for you to give her the alternative of making the sacrifice for the church. It would be a great satisfaction to you to have so worked on her religious nature as to induce her to give up a husband that the church might have a cathedral."

Mr. Trevor was only partially persuaded, but he said he would consider the matter of putting the case to Miss Seaton. Mrs. Whitridge went so far as to suggest that if he would do so at her home she might be of some assistance in the matter. Upon this assurance he asked her to invite the young lady there on the following evening and give him the necessary opportunity.

Now there was as much chance of Miss Seaton's giving up an attractive husband and a fortune that the church might have a cathedral as there would be of a small boy giving the lion's share of his candy to his playmates. She dined the next day with Mrs. Whitridge, who posted her on the sacrifice the clergyman hoped she would make.

When Mr. Trevor called in the evening he found the two ladies in a cozy little side parlor illuminated by dimly shaded lamps. Mrs. Whitridge soon after arose to leave them, the clergyman casting a wistful look after her as she retired. She drew a portiere after her that Mr. Trevor might submit his proposition without observation or interruption.

It was nearly an hour before he got his courage up to a point that warranted a beginning. Then he spoke of those persons, most of them saints, who had made sacrifices. From that he spoke of his own resolution to give up for the church wife and children. Then he dwelt on the temples that had from time immemorial been erected for the worship of a divine power; the myriad of souls that had found comfort in them.

Here he paused to note the effect on his listener and was much encouraged. He saw in her eyes a beautiful far away look which seemed as if she were gazing into heaven, seeming to drink in the lesson as from a divine teacher. She had drawn nearer to him, so near that he inhaled her warm breath and a delicate violet perfume that hung about her.

Then he began the work for which he had been preparing her. He spoke of his father's wishes, of the fortune which he desired to turn into stone and mortar for the Lord's service. Then having dwelt on what a beautiful thing it would be for her to resign this fortune—he modestly left himself out of the question—to the church, he made his proposal.

Meanwhile a few invited guests had been coming in and were received by the hostess in the drawing room. While they were chatting a sob was heard coming from the little side parlor. Mrs. Whitridge started.

"I must see who's in trouble," she said, and, crossing the hall, she drew the portiere that screened the clergyman and Nan Seaton, exposing them to her guests. Nan was sobbing with her head on the man's shoulder, while he clasped her in an endeavor to console her."

The trap was sprung. Leaving his companion, the clergyman, red as a turkey cock, stepped forward and asked to be congratulated on his engagement.

When Mrs. Whitridge and Miss Seaton were alone for a few moments previous to the latter's departure for her home escorted by her fiance, Miss Seaton asked:

"Did you hear the signal?"

"Yes; you gave it loud enough to wake the dead."

The morning after the clergyman wedded Nan Seaton Mrs. Whitridge announced to the director of her hospital that she had received a donation of $20,000.

The Rev. Mr. Trevor is rising in the ministry. He sometimes speaks of gifts he would like to make with the fortune his father left him, but receives no encouragement from his wife. She has given the house of Trevor an heir in the third generation and proposes that said heir shall come into his whole inheritance.

Seized His Chance.

The county courthouse was burning, and the judge was very anxious to arrive at the scene of much of his life work as quickly as possible and posthaste sent the negro house boy to saddle Sintram, his horse. The judge's sons, seeing Sintram in process of being saddled, pre-empted the remaining horses and rode off. The little negro considered the matter for a moment and rode Sintram off, thus forcing the judge to take a hurried and, as he considered it, an entirely unnecessary walk of half a mile.

To the surprise and chagrin of the small negro when the judge caught him he gave him a good thrashing. When one of the young men remarked: "Zack, you should not have ridden father's horse off. You might have known he would have whipped you, and you deserved it."

"I know dat, Mr. Dave," responded Zack, "but I kin git er whippin' mos' any day, an' I never will see de cotehouse burn ag'in."—Los Angeles Times.

Flags at Half Mast.

Did you ever stop to think what connection there could be between a flag that was not properly hoisted and the death of a great man? Ever since flags were used in war it has been the custom to have the flag of the superior or conquering nation above that of the inferior or vanquished. When an army found itself hopelessly beaten it hauled its flag down far enough for the flag of the victors to be placed above it on the same pole. This was a token not only of submission, but of respect. In those days when a famous soldier died flags were lowered out of respect to his memory. The custom long ago passed from purely military usage to public life of all kinds, the flag flying at half mast being a sign that the dead man was worthy of universal respect. The space left above it is for the flag of the great conqueror of all, the Angel of Death.—New York Sun.

Wasting Time.

"What!" exclaimed the young man whom we shall call Bill. "You got engaged last night? Why, Archie, my dear old friend, tell me how you ever came to do it!"

"Well, Billie," blushed the fellow we have already named as Archie, "I really hardly know myself. But it was just as easy as falling off a log. I was on the edge of a proposal—she gave me a gentle push—and there I was—engaged!"

"Gee! I never had any such experience. Every time I try to start my knees knock together, my teeth chatter, and my tongue gets stuck in my throat. I've tried a dozen times to propose to Marguerite Dempster, you know, and I get stuck every time."

"And she lets you get stuck?"

"Why, yes."

"Then you're courting the wrong girl."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Married His Grandmother.

There lived in the village of Arreton, Isle of Wight, many years ago a young man who was betrothed to a young woman. Both were poor and in humble life, but the grandfather of the young man had money, and he fell in love with the young woman and proposed marriage to her. The girl told her lover. He was displeased, but, having pondered over the dilemma, saw a way to extricate himself and his sweetheart from the same. "Marry him," said he to the girl. "He is rich. He cannot live long. When he dies you'll have his money and I'll have you." She took the advice. By the marriage she became the young man's grandmother. Not long after the old man died, and then she wedded her first betrothed.

Rather Emphatic.

In a Virginia courthouse a negro was describing how a cutting scrape started.

"Dis here Johnson nigger started toward me," said the witness, "and ez he done so he stuck his hand down in his hip pocket. And I says to him, 'Nigger,' I says, 'whutever you has got your hand on now better be a chicken, 'cause I suttinly is gwine to make you eat it!'"—Saturday Evening Post.

Giant Spider Crab.

The giant Japanese spider crab is the ugliest looking shellfish in the world. Its body measures about one foot across, and the claws have a "spread" now and then of over twelve feet. These spider crabs inhabit the Japan sea and often live 2,000 feet below the surface of the waves.

Didn't Like Questions.

Bishop Thrilwall, an English prelate, had the greatest possible aversion to answering questions. One day a tailor said to him when he had been summoned to take the bishop's measurements, "What are your lordship's orders?" "I want a suit of clothes." "Here is a very nice cloth, my lord." "Ah!" "And this is likewise a very good one." "Yes." "Here is another, of excellent quality." "Very." "Which material will your lordship decide upon?" "I want a suit of clothes!" And that was all the answer the tailor could get. When the new gardener accosted him as he was walking, book in hand, in the garden to ask, "How will your lordship have this border laid out?" there was no answer. "How will your lordship be pleased to have this border laid out?" was the next attempt. Still there was no reply. But when the question was repeated for the third time the answer came, "You are the gardener, I believe, and I am the bishop!"

World's Most Valuable Garden.

The Bank of England has an old fashioned garden in its midst. In the center is a fountain, there are a couple of trees, and the paths are graveled. This garden has a curious history. In reality it is the churchyard of the vanished Church of St. Christopher le Stock, which used to stand on the site of the Mansion House. One reason why the church was pulled down was because its tower completely overlooked the bank, and it was feared that it would be a danger to the "old lady" if the church was occupied by rioters. As the bank occupies the site of the entire parish of Christopher le Stock it is said that any freeman of the city of London can claim admission to the old garden. As a matter of fact, any one who cares to see it may do so during business hours, and it is well worth a visit, if only for the fact that it is the most valuable garden in the world.—London Spectator.

Transportation In Charles II.'s Time.

On the best highways heavy articles were in the time of Charles II. generally conveyed from place to place by stage wagons. In the straw of these vehicles nestled a crowd of passengers who could not afford to travel by coach or on horseback and who were prevented by infirmity or by the weight of their luggage from going on foot. The expense of transmitting heavy goods in this way was enormous. From London to Birmingham the charge was £7 ($35) a ton, from London to Exeter £12 ($60) a ton. This was about 30 cents a ton for every mile. The cost of conveyance amounted to a prohibitory tax on many useful articles. Coal in particular was never seen except in the districts where it was poduced or in the districts to which it could be carried by sea and was indeed always known in the south of England by the name of sea coal.—Macaulay.

Meals In the Good Old Days.

In the sixteenth century it was considered a sign of effeminacy to eat breakfast. Says Harrison in his "Description of Britain," published in 1530: "Of old we had breakfastes in the forenoone, beverages or nuntions after dinner, and thereto reare suppers. Now these old repasts, thanked be God, are verie well left, and each one, except here and there some young hungrie stomach that cannot fast till dinner time, contenteth himself with dinner and supper only. The nobility, gentry and students ordinarily go to dinner at 11 before noon and to supper at 5. The merchants dine and sup seldom before 12 at noon or 6 at night, especially in London. The husbandmen also dine at high noon and sup at 7 or 8, but out of terms, in our universities, the scholars dine at 10."—London Chronicle.

"Brown has refused to give us an extra day's time to meet his bill. He says it's been running long enough."

"All right. Mail him a check today and forget to have it signed. There's more than one way of stretching credit if you have to."—Detroit Free Press.

Perfectly Clear.

A Cleveland schoolteacher writes that she asked her class what was the difference between the expressions "a while" and "a time." Nobody seemed to have any ideas on the subject. Finally the light of intelligence was seen to shine in the eyes of one little boy, and the teacher called upon him to save the intellectual honor of the class.

"I know, teacher!" he cried eagerly. "When papa says he's going out for a while mamma says she knows he's going out for a time!"

That's one way of looking at it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Preacher and the Dog.

An aged darkey preacher in the south once strayed into a town where he chanced upon two young clergymen engaged in a warm dispute over some deep theological problem. They finally raised their voices till they disturbed a dog that had been lying by the fire sleeping soundly. At this the old preacher, who sat near by sipping a cup of tea, turned and kicked the dog:

"Shet up!" he commanded. "What has yo' got to say 'bout it, anyhow? You don't know no more 'bout it dan dey do!'

Where Starlings Bring Ruin.

In "Quiet Days In Spain," the author, C. B. Luffman, describes the ravages of the starlings in a hacienda devoted to raising muscatel raisins near Malaga:

"Dogs and goats are very fond of grapes and are only kept off them by rural guards, but the greatest enemy of all is the starling. This bird flies over from Africa in such millions as literally to darken the earth. Whenever they camp for the night they leave a desert. Every particle of fruit, leaf, tender shoot and piece of soft bark vanishes. As the saying is, 'Many crops spell various fortunes; one crop of starlings spells ruin.' The blowing of a southern wind and the sound of wings in the air produces panic, men's faces blanch with terror. In despair, bells are rung, guns fired, torches lighted, and donkeys, mules and horses are galloped up and down and round about to scare 'los bichos'—the beasts—as they are termed."

Thumb Prints.

In the Argentine Republic the identification cards of policemen, coachmen, cab drivers, commissionaires and servants have since 1896 borne their finger prints. Upon all passports and bank receipts for deposits the imprint of the thumb must be made at the time of delivery. In Roumania since 1903 the thumb print has been substituted for the cross made instead of signature by persons who cannot write. In the Philippine Islands those who cannot write are not obliged to be identified by witnesses at savings banks, but have to make their mark with their thumb. The same system has been used in the banks of Bengal for fifty years. In France to put an end to the fraud of enlistment, desertion and re-enlistment for the bounty paid in the Foreign Legion, every man's finger prints are taken and kept on file.

The First Railway Gauge.

An interesting story was told by one of George Stephenson's biographers relating how the great engineer came to adopt the four foot eight and a half inch gauge for his railways. Some time previous to the building of his Newcastle and Carlisle railway Stephenson had an opportunity of inspecting some portion of an old Roman wall, through which the chariots used to be driven. Deep ruts made by the chariot wheels were still visible, and on measuring these he found their distance apart to be as near as possible four feet eight and a half inches. Stephenson thereupon came to the conclusion that if a world power like the Romans had made such use of the measure for its chariots he could not be wrong in adopting those measurements as a rule for his railway.

Fogs Bewilder Birds.

It is a curious thing that, though human beings are utterly bewildered in a dense fog, most animals find their way through it without much difficulty. A horse will trot along in its right direction as though the air were perfectly clear, and not only that, but will take the right turning at the right moment if it is at all accustomed to the road. A human being would take any turning but the right one. Birds, on the other hand, are utterly bewildered by fogs. Pigeons, for instance, will remain motionless all day long, half asleep, huddled up in their pigeon houses. Chickens and poultry of all kinds won't stir all the time a heavy fog is about. Birds of all kinds, as a matter of fact, seem helpless during foggy weather.—Pearson's.

Snow Garlands.

Curious ropes of snow that form on window ledges, tree branches, etc., at a temperature near freezing point have been brought to notice by Dr. Karl Kassner as "snow garlands." One of these ropes photographed on the building of the Meteorological Institute in Berlin was four inches in thickness and was suspended by the two ends, the distance between the points of support being three and three-quarters feet and the vertical sag about one and one-half inches. The snow on the little projection of the wall, it is supposed, was warmed by the heat of the building, when the middle slipped down and, being thus removed from the source of heat, froze again.

He Told Her.

A middle aged governess on arriving at a new situation was formally introduced to the family, and the next morning "Master Tom," the hopeful of the family, said to her, "Miss Parker, are you Leghorn or Cochin-China?" "Why do you ask such an extraordinary question?" she asked.

"Because," answered the boy, "I heard dad say to mummy after you left the room last night that you were no longer a chicken."

Disconcerting.

A prominent English clergyman once congratulated an old lady on her bravery in fighting her way to church against a terrible tempest, but received the disconcerting reply, "My husband gets so crossgrained after meals that I have to get out of his way, so I might as well go to church."

Used to It.

"Why, man, you have no sense of humor. When I first heard that joke I laughed till my sides ached."

"So did I."—Christian Advocate.

Deeds and Motives.

Trying a Joke.

Some years ago in a North Carolina court, Judge Shipp presiding, the trial of a cause had been protracted till near midnight. The jury were tired and sleepy and showed flagging attention. Willie Murchison, who was addressing the jury, thought to arouse them, so he said, "Gentlemen, I will tell you an anecdote." Instantly the judge, the jury and the few spectators pricked up their ears and were all attention, as Murchison was admirable in that line, had a fund of anecdotes and no one could tell them better. But he soon proceeded to tell one of the dullest, prosiest and most pointless jokes possible. Everybody looked disappointed. The judge, leaning over, said in an unmistakable tone of disappointment, "Mr. Murchison, I don't see the point of that joke." "Nor I either," replied the witty counsel. "But your honor told it to me on our way down here, and as I thought the lack of appreciation must be due to my obtuseness I concluded to give the joke a trial by jury."

Remarkable Feats of Strength.

Louis de Boufflers, who lived in the sixteenth century, could break a bar of iron with his hands. The strongest man could not take from him a ball which he held between his thumb and first finger. While standing up, with no support whatever, four strong soldiers could not move him. He remained as firm as a rock. Sometimes he amused himself by taking on his shoulders his own horse, fully harnessed, and with that heavy load he promenaded the public square, to the great delight of the inhabitants. At about the same time there lived a Spaniard named Pledro, who could break the strongest handcuffs that could be put around his wrists. He folded his arms on his chest, and ten men pulling in different directions with ropes could not unfold them. Augustus II., elector of Saxony, was a man of great strength. He could carry a man in his open hand.

The Puppy's Fault.

An enthusiastic feminist is entertaining friends by reading the lines which Sheridan indited to the puppy with a canister tied to its tail. Lord Erskine, it appears, had likened wives to that same canister, and, Lady Erskine being justly annoyed by the remark, Sheridan dashed off the following impromptu:

Lord Erskine, at woman presuming to rail,
Called a wife a tin canister tied to one's tail.
And fair Lady Ann while the subject he carries on Seems hurt at his lordship's degrading comparison.
But wherefore degrading, considered aright?
A canister's polished and useful and bright.
And should dirt its original purity hide,
That's the fault of the puppy to whom it is tied.

Flying Powers of Birds.

The rate at which some birds can migrate under favorable conditions is extraordinary, and as one listens to their plaintive cries coming from the darkness overhead it is difficult to realize that in a few hours these same birds may be within the arctic circle and a little later may be even crossing the pole itself. * * * Less is known of the actual dates of the departure of the migratory birds in autumn than of those of their arrival earlier in the year, and this for obvious reasons. The way in which our most charming songsters silently skulk out of the country in the autumn is very different from that in which they make their triumphal entry in the spring, when every wood and copse resounds with their melodies.—Windsor Magazine.

Mrs. Washington's Gowns.

General Washington wore at his inauguration a full suit of fine cloth, the handiwork of his own household. At a ball given in New Jersey in honor of Mrs. Washington she wore a "simple russet gown" and white handkerchief about her neck. On one occasion she gave the best proof of her success in domestic manufactures by the exhibition of two of her dresses, which were composed of cotton, striped with silk and entirely homemade. The silk stripes in the fabric were woven from the ravelings of brown silk stockings and old crimson chair covers.

Musical Note.

"What's the matter over there in the horn part?" asked Dr. Strauss at a rehearsal.

"I'm sorry, Dr. Strauss," replied the horn player, "but I can not play this passage on the horn. It may be all right on the piano, but"—

"Don't worry yourself," answered the composer-conductor. "It is equally impossible on the piano."—Musical Courier.

Business Courtesy.

Little Willie—Say, pa, what is business courtesy? Pa—There are two kinds of business courtesy, my son. One is the kind extended to people who pay cash, and the other is extended to people who don't.—London Answers.

Observant Youngster.

"Gracie, did you learn anything new at school today?"

"Sure! I found out how I could eat an apple without the teacher seein' me do it."—Chicago Tribune.

On Friday evening of last week two young men engaged in a slugging match on High Street, in front of the Centre County Bank. Just about the time things were becoming interesting George Eberhart came running across the street and placed both young men under arrest and started off with them to the lock-up. He did it in such a business-like manner that spectators naturally wondered what authority he had for arresting anybody. It seems that for quite a while past George has been a regularly deputized special officer, having been sworn in as such by John J. Bower, the burgess. He is also a special fire policeman. George does not wear an officer's uniform, but he has all the qualifications for making arrests without the slightest bit of fuss Scrappers about town will do well to not only keep one eye open for Dukeman and Beezer, but also for George Eberhart, before engaging in hostilities.

Where Was John?

A San Francisco woman, whose husband had been dead some years, went to a medium, who produced to her satisfaction the spirit of her dead husband.

"My dear John," said the widow to the spirit, "are you happy now?"

"I am very happy," John replied.

"Happier than you were on earth with me?" she asked.

"Yes," was the answer, "I am far happier now than I was on earth with you."

"Tell me, John, what is it like in Heaven?"

"Heaven!" John replied, "I'm not in Heaven."—McCall's Magazine.

Wellesley Given Fire Scare.

Centre County girls who have attended Wellesley College will read with interest the experience of students there on Sunday morning, last. Shortly after 6 o'clock in the morning the college fire alarms were sounded and the students left their rooms in orderly fashion, but clad in all sorts of night array. When they reached the campus they learned that the faculty had ordered the fire drill to see in just what fashion the girls would act under such an emergency. Only three sleepy-heads were left in the buildings, and these were quickly aroused by their fellow-collegians.
